

GORDON-ORISKY

200 Guests at Brilliant Festivities in Music Hall Tuesday Evening.

Music Hall Tuesday evening with its festoons of varied color forming a canopy in the center of the hall, with its long tables heaped with the good things of the bridal supper with Stevens's orchestra delighting the ear with lively music and its pleasant people assembled for the ceremony and feasts was an unusually attractive scene.

The occasion was the Hebrew wedding of which the principals were Morris D. Orisky, a Portland young and prosperous Middle St. clothier prominent in both Hebrew and American business and fraternity life, and Miss Marcia H. Gordon, daughter of Samuel Gordon of Bath. Present were friends and relatives of the bridal couple to the number of 275, a large number of the guests coming from Portland and Boston, the remainder being Bath people and residents of nearby towns.

The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Morris Cohen, according to the impressive orthodox ritual of the Jews, was solemnized in the early part of the evening. To the strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march first the groom was led in by his relatives to his station before the rabbi beneath the canopy and then also with her parents and relatives marched in the bride. The father and mother were there to give the bride to her future husband and the couple were attended by bridesmaids. Mrs. Joseph Williams of Boston and Mrs. Samuel Mack of Bath; the groom by his best men George Williams of Boston and Samuel Mack of this city. The flower girls were the Misses Fannie and Ida Orisky of Portland, nieces of the groom.

The bride made a very handsome picture, beautifully gowned in white satin with court train of panne velvet draped from the shoulders and the Valenciennes lace insertion in the sleeves of her gown at the shoulders. She wore the regulation veil and her only jewelry was a long necklace of pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a large shower bouquet of bride roses, maiden hair fern tips and smilax. The groom was in the usual evening dress with white vest. They made, as all said, a strikingly handsome couple. The maids of honor were stylishly gowned in blue chiffon over silk and carried bouquets of carnation pinks. The little flower girls were in pink.

Six times a little procession of the relatives marched around the bride and groom. The rabbi offered prayer and read the marriage contract, the groom placed on a finger of the bride's hand the wedding ring; the reverend gentleman offered prayer and then a glass was broken, a custom prevailing among the Jews at their feasts since the destruction of their temple in Jerusalem. The two newly weds were then showered with the customary felicitations and all were soon seated at the tables for the wedding feast, which, in this case consisted of a roast chicken dinner with all that belongs thereto. The long tables accommodated 200 guests, and at the head of the one on the west side of the hall sat the bride and groom. In front of them was placed a large and beautifully frosted cake with clasped hands on top.

The wedding ceremony had taken half an hour for its completion and another hour had been passed in feasting, so that it was after nine o'clock when dancing began which was enjoyed until the clock struck twelve. In the dancing, which consisted of round dances, young and old took part. One of the cutest features of the party was the waltzing of little Miss Fannie Orisky, a niece of the groom, a girl of eight years who had for her partner the six-year-old Albert Williams of Lynn. The little fellow was held in the arms of the little girl.

From Portland came J. W. Salhanick, who was master of ceremonies during the evening, and the brothers and sisters of the groom, Jacob, Joseph and Max Orisky, Miss Lillian Orisky and Mr. and Mrs. H. Fireman. There were present also 15 Knights of Pythias, a delegation representing Montjoy Lodge of the Forest City. Other out of town guests were Harry Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Williams of Lynn, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Markson of Portland, Morris Sacknoff, Hymen Finn, Israel Bernstein, Levi Terry, Joseph Woolman, David Beckleman, Miss Rose Levine, Mrs. F. Levine, Louis L. Taylor, the latter a cousin of the groom; Miss Lillian Cohen, Miss Rose Moretsky, the Misses Sarah, Rose and Minnie Mack, Pauline Helfont, Samuel Jacobs, Miss Sadie Backinick, Mr. Salony, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Marsson, Mr. and Mrs. Gitting, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor and family of Portland; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Williams of Boston; E. M. Cohen of Lewiston. Others from Portland were J. Gerrish, Mr. Gerber, M. Simonds, Henry Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Helfont and William Franklin, and Mr. and Mrs. Mack were present from Brunswick.

Several of the Portland young ladies were very handsome and still, but the Bath bride was, in her bride robes, the fairest of the party. Speaking of the good appearances, Officers Rice and Anderson in all the glory of full dress uniforms who looked after the door, were handsome representatives of the Bath police; so the girls said.

President of the Common Council Kane was among Bath guests present and he was popular among the belles of the occasion.

WOOLWICH

On Friday evening March 10, the seniors of Wiscasset Academy presented the drama, "The Runaways," at Woolwich Grange followed by a dance.

Velma, the little daughter of L. A. Bailey, who has been seriously ill is improving.

The new desks for the Montsweag schoolhouse have arrived.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. Jessie Mains is going to move away. Dr. Charles McDonald has bought the house she has occupied, of Alton B. Thwing.

Mrs. Frank Head, who is an expert chicken raiser, has, we hear, chickens nearly two months old.

The friends of Mrs. Sarah P. E. Hathorne are congratulating her on winning the $5 in gold in the late contest.

Work is done on the Spinney lot for the season.

Charles Dana will go to Bath to school this spring. This leaves only two scholars in Union Ridge district, as most of the older ones go out of town to school and two families having children have recently moved to Bath.

We notice three farms in town for sale and hope some second Mr. Butler will buy them and have a lot of help and a baker's dozen of children.

The Congregationalist C. E. Society hold their meeting Sunday evening; the Baptist, Thursday evenings at private houses, last at Mrs. Clara Hathorn's.

PHIPPSBURG

Messrs. Merton and Leland Oliver were Portland visitors last week.

Miss Dora Christiansen who has been confined to the house for the past two weeks, is able to be out again.

As the Virginia was approaching the landing at West Georgetown, Monday morning, she passed through a flock of a hundred or more black ducks, which seemed to pay no attention to her until it seemed to the passengers they would be run over. Some just swinging to one side to let the boat pass, which goes to show that the game laws in this section are respected.
