EDITORIAL

Few of us realize how lucky we are to be in such a wonderful place as Camp Lown. This camp offers all that could be asked for. There is a strong Jewish feeling which is always present in our hearts here. Besides all the various activities which we all take part in Hebrew and Jewish instruction are also given. I am sure we all enjoy the beautiful and reverent services held Friday evening and Saturday. Conducted by the campers, these services have the real Jewish spirit. With this spirit and this enthusiasm the campers and counselors of Camp Lown, I am sure, will be a credit not only to their friends and families but to the world.

CAMP COUNCIL NEWS

The campers' council is going along very well. The first real project that came to the attention of the council was the problem of having forty-five minutes after supper for boating and softball games, etc. This meant that supper would have to be a quiet and fast meal. The council is also planning a camper's counselor's day and a Keren Ami council. They also planned a Keren Ami pledge to be offered by the campers. The council will meet twice a week, on Saturday and Wednesday; and if a special meeting is needed, it will be called.

Yours till the next issue.

HEBREW CLASSES

The Hebrew classes have been very active this year. From the beginners right up to the advanced classes, everyone is learning new Hebrew words and expressions. One of the most valuable aids that has been added to the intermediate and advanced classes is the Hebrew dictionaries. With these, we can learn many new words that are connected with our everyday activities, such as sports, music, camp, household.

In the Beginners "A" class, the campers are told a story about each new letter they learn; this helps them a great deal. They have learned such words as mother, father, hello, Sabbath and are also learning how to read, write, and translate simple words. Some Hebrew songs and dances are included in the lessons.

The Beginners "B" are reading the same book as the Inters but are not translating all the stories. They are learning just a simple vocabulary.

The Inters are reading about Abraham, translating the stories, and learning many new words. In addition, they have been hearing about Herzl and Bialik.

The advanced classes are reading the book, "Artsenu," which is about a family going to Palestine.

The Hebrew classes play a very important part in our camp life. Much credit goes to the teachers--Naftale, Iola, Judy, Edith, Gladys, Rosita, Julian, Hy--who are really doing a fine job.

DRAMATICS

The play, "Cave of the King," based on a story by Chiam Bialik, was given Sunday, July 13, for the parents and campers. Camp Lewn decided to give this play because of the anniversary of Bialik's death. It was an experiment in creative dialogue. Hy Sky did the casting with the help of Joel Zion. Sets were constructed by the arts and crafts department, under Harriet and Marilyn. Iok kept an eye on the musical part of the play. Costuming, make-up, and special effects were done by Hy and the dramatic group. The cast was as follows: Joseph-Leila Steg Jonathan-Bunny Lacritz, Elijah; Natalie Koven, King David-Carol Plavin, palm tree-Dick Sterns, deer-Robert Saltz, ruler-Linda Gottleib, three buyers in the market place-Lois Daniels, Frances Weisberg, Natalie Koven, Bialik-Howard Silver, little girl-Linda Lavin. Linda and Sandra Shea sang solos. Rosita was the director of the dancing as well as of a little poem given by the juniors. Judy Gordon was in charge of a little skit given by the juniors also.

Morty Ross and Jack Golding

ARTS AND CRAFTS

The arts and crafts shop has been very busy with the making of candlestick holders for Friday night and with a variety of things, such as leather work, finger painting, sculpturing, weaving, mask making, etc. There is a display of the best work done by the campers in the dining hall. Also in the dining hall are the Fourth of July mural done by the arts and crafts and a series of posters with pictures of everyday objects used at the table together with their Hebrew names.

NATURE AND SCIENCE

Nature has proven to be one of the most interesting and most popular activities at Camp Lown. Two weeks ago a frog was dissected; its heart beat for three minutes after being taken from its stomach.

The dissecting of a toad featured last Tuesday's class. Adrenalin was put on the toad's heart, which beat for forty-five minutes after being taken from the body.

Two snakes, one a dead pine snake and the other a live garter snake, are on display.

Tex Kless, "The Nature Man," is in high hopes that the turtle eggs he has will hatch. Several birds' nests and a swallow can also be seen at the nature and lodge. Some blue printing of leaves has been done. In all, nature and science has been very successful.

Also on display are two live bats, which Tex has hopes of keeping alive somehow.

Licky, is it still Linda?....Bunk is still, and always will be, talking about that cute little singer....Wonder how many days the waiters have gone in for swimming....Wonder where Dr. K. learned the polka....Marty L. is sweet sixteen and never been kissed-except by the girl counselors....Robert Saltz announced in the Hebrew Class that he had danced with the same girl 20 times. We wonder who she is....Herby Cohen, did you have fun sitting next to Donna Levine at the talent show?....Philip Keven cleared a space at the volley ball game for Linda Levin. ## "DEAR RUTH"

On July 17th the senior boys and girls of Camp Lown made the long journey to Lakewood to see the play, "Dear Ruth." Little did the campers of the counselors dream that in their midst there was an actress. For during the play a very important and humorous line was uttered by a resident of Camp Lown. At the most dynamic moment in the play, as the hero was tenderly embracing the heroine, was heard, and I quote, "Oh, my!!" This statement had the audience rolling in the aisles. It was a very successful trip, and all enjoyed both the trip and the play itself very much.

"THE MAN IN THE DOORWAY"

The loud report of a revolver resounded. The man at the window reeled and collapsed on the ground. Two well-built men entered in. One held a smoking revolver in his hand. He felt the man on the ground.

"He's dead, the way he muttered.

"What's this in his hand?" asked the one referred to as Sam. The first man picked up the bomb.

"Whew! Guess the Doc was right when he said that some gang was after that stuff he's working on."

Just then the scientists ran up.

"What happened?" exclaimed Dr. Michael.

"We're from the F.B.I." said the man holding the gun. I am Joe Donalds. This is Sam Ordberg. The noise of the machine in the house concealed the sound of our car as we drove up. This fellow on the ground was trying to throw a Knock-out Gas Bomb through your window. I shot him as he was set to throw. He's dead."

Ten minutes later the body had been taken care of and Joe and Sam were seated in the parlor talking with the scientists. Dr. Michael had explained all that he knew about the attempt to snatch the secrets of Invention Z.

"The man who phoned was my agent," he said. "Hard telling what's happened to the poor devil."

"We started a search for him already. We'll find him sometime," said Sam. "Now about this Shuman Karsel. He's got a record as long as this room. He's spent most of his life in jail. He had a pleasant stay in Alcatraz, among other places, a few years back; and since then we haven't had any trouble with him. But we know that he has a fairly well organized gang behind him."

"It's just like him to try a job like this," broke in Joe. "We've called headquarters to send some boys to take care of the stuff out back. We'll try to find out who he is. Meanwhile, Sam and I will stay here and keep watch on the place."

That evening at supper Dr. Michael told the G-men that the invention was finally completed. "We'll inform the War Department in the morning and arrange for the test."

In their room that night, Joe and Sam were getting ready for bed.

"Sam, this is an inside job," blurted Joe. "Look, the only way that guy, who's now a corpse, could have known the location of this place is that he was informed by somebody here," he continued. "I'm willing to bet a month's salary that whoever this fellow is, he will try getting those secrets. I'm going to spend the night in the lab. If he has nerve enough to try to get the blueprints, I'll be waiting for him. You set up watch outside."

Once established in the lab, Joe waited. Fifteen minutes passed. One hour. Two hours. It was almost midnight.

The door started to open. For an instant a man was silhouetted in the doorway. He advanced cautiously to the center of the room. He made his way to the table that held the blueprints. (To be continued) Marvin Karp

MIDDLEWEIGHT TITLE CHANGES HANDS

The last night challenger Rocky Graziano climbed into the ring to fight Tony Zale, middleweight champion of the world.

This was the battle that boxing fans had been gleefully awaiting since last September, when a real brawl was staged between these same two maulers in Madison Square Garden in New York. The fans yelled their lungs out that night. They are still talking about that sixth round, when Zale, after Graziano had thrown everything but the kitchen sink at him, was given up for lost. Tony flattened Rocky on the art and won this spectacular fight, which was the battle of 1948.

So, when the second battle between them came up, the fight fans all over the country flocked to Chicago, naturally expecting another great brawl; and they were not disappointed. Zale was in the pink of condition, but so was Graziano. Rocky had been suspended in New York for failing to report an attempted bribe, but this didn't seem to harm his fighting.

Zale was the betting favorite. The Iron of Steel from Gary, Indiana, knew that in order to win he would have to K.O. the younger Graziano in the early rounds.

As the bell rang for Round 1 both fighters came out fighting. The first five rounds held their share of the thrill; the fans waited. Graziano's face had a smudge of blood, but Zale was tiring.

At the start of the sixth round, so fatal before for Rocky, the ropes tore into Tony. Several terrific punches from Graziano's powerful fists and Zale staggered against the ropes. He clung there for support. His head went through the ropes, and Tony's arm hung helplessly by his side. Graziano waited for the opening to give the knock-out punch.

At that moment the referee pulled Rocky away and stopped the fight. A few seconds later came the announcement, "The winner, by a technical knockout, and the 137 middleweight champion of the world--Rocky Graziano." The long awaited brawl was over, and Graziano, the new champ, said into the radio microphone, "Hello, ev. The bad boy done it. I'm champ."

One of the largest indoor crowds in boxing history had witnessed the battle. Tony Zale received a little more than $140,000, while Graziano received exactly half that sum. Zale came out of the fight in much better shape than did Rocky, whose face was beaten to a pulp.

Zale's managers say that the bout was too much for Tony. The latest reports say that he will fight Rocky early next year.

For the time being at least there is a new middleweight king--Rocky Graziano.

BASEBALL

On July 13 one of the cleanest best-played games of baseball took place here. That is one side of the story. Now read the other side.

The game was dirty. Everyone was arguing, and no one could hear himself think. Some people would like to know exactly who was taking the game. Some say Mitzi; some say Sky, and others say both. Just what some of us would like to know is how someone could time a game with a watch which doesn't have a second hand. The high scorer for the counselors was Frank Tonkonow, who netted 13 points; while the high scorer for the waiters was Mickey Weiner with 14 points. The final score was 36-35.

Box score:

Waiters	Counselors
Flavin--0	Zion--6
Samine--13	Turtall--2
Schultz--0	Tonkonow--13
Weiner--14	Kless("Tex")--7
Shapiro--8	Berg--8
	Sky--0

Danny Miller

SOFTBALL

Bunks 12 and 13 divided up and had a fast softball game. Captains were Bert Schwartz and Danny Miller. Schwartz's team trailed until the last inning, when they came ahead with a two run rally to win the game 7-6.

A game called on account of darkness and declared no game was played by the members of Bunks 12, 13, and the waiters. Gil Shapiro and Mickey Weiner were captains. Mickey's team was ahead 3-0 when the game was called.

Mert Robinson

BOXING

Sunday evening, July 10, the camp participated in boxing matches. There were seven bouts. The first one was between two juniors, Phil Koven and Daryl Cooper. This turned out to be a draw. T.K.O.'d Dave Lucell; Milt Silvers beat Dave Weisberg on fouls; Mike Ross T.K.O.'d Sandy Podolsky; The Bert Schwartz-Marvin Karp bout finished in a draw; Dick Sterns beat Danny Miller; and it was a draw between Marty Plavin and Mickey Weiner. Tex was the announcer. Mike Ross

TENNIS

Since the tennis courts opened, many people have been flocking to them in order that they might play.

On July 13, which was visiting day, there was a big match between Joel, head counselor, and Dick Sterns of Bunk 13. Joel beat Dick two straight games. When you read this, don't get the wrong idea, as Dick is also a very good player.

Whitey hopes to have some tennis games among the campers who have chosen tennis.

The tennis courts are in good condition now, except for one or two dead spots.

In a return match between Dick Sterns and Joel (It is not finished yet) the score is 3 games apiece.

Most of the players have been concentrating on forehand strokes instead of playing the games. Some of the advanced players have started their backhand strokes.

Danny Miller

SWIMMING

by Schwartz

On Sunday, July 20, there was a swimming meet between the girls and boys of Camp Low. Under the fine supervision of Frank the meet ran along very well and provided a very interesting afternoon for the campers. The boys took the lead at the beginning, never to lose it. The final score was 64, for the boys, to 43.

In the senior, 20-yard, free-style Mert Robinson came in first; Sandra Shea and Dick Sterns tied for second. Weiner, followed by Leila Stein and Schwartz, won the 20-yard back stroke. 20-yard side stroke was won by Danny Miller, followed by Elaine Goldman and Francis Weisberg. In the medley relay the boys were the winners, with Bert Schwartz doing the back stroke; Phil Weiner, side stroke and Robinson; crawl. In the relay the boys were again the winners, with Ross, Rudman, Sterns, and Miller. Marvin Karp won the senior novelty race, and Herbie Cohen won the intermediate 20-yard free style. The intermediate 20-yard side stroke was won by Sid Unobsky. Mike Ross came in first in the 20-yard intermediate back stroke. Milton Silver, Jane Kapiloff, and Eleanor Epstein also won contests.
