Nancy Davidson, Curator

Neil Welliver is best known as a contemporary realist painter. His education in the 1950s was at the height of abstract expressionism. Accordingly, his paintings have elements of abstraction, although most strongly in his early works.

During the 1960s and 1970s, Welliver's paintings were dominated by the figure. This body of work, whether of men, women, cats, dogs, cows, children, musicians or skeletons...filled a busy world for Welliver and paved his way toward a final, deep and quiet absorption with the Maine landscape. By the 1980s, the Maine landscape became the dominant focus of his work for the rest of his life.

Neil Welliver earned a B.F.A. at the Philadelphia Museum, College of Art. He continued his graduate art education at the Yale School of Art, receiving an M.F.A., studying with Josef Albers and Willem de Kooning. After teaching at Yale, he went on to chair the Graduate School of Fine Arts at the University of Pennsylvania from 1966-89, and then was Professor Emeritus from 1989 until his death in 2005.
